Yes Start date

No If your spouse is gainfully employed in Switzerland, you may be required to have insurance in Switzerland, depending on certain conditions. Your situation needs to be reviewed individually. We will contact you.

Please note that if your stay abroad is temporary in nature or if you cannot demonstrate that you are resident abroad, the insurance obligation in Switzerland will continue to apply and you will not therefore be able to terminate your mandatory healthcare insurance. If you have a partner or spouse with financial ties to Switzerland, please clarify the insurance obligation with his/her Swiss health insurer.

If you are no longer subject to the insurance obligation in Switzerland, any existing supplementary insurance plans will be terminated, unless otherwise agreed.

Important information in respect of continued insurance obligation if you are moving to an EU/EFTA country or the United Kingdom

If you are maintaining a financial relationship with Switzerland, for example by receiving a salary, pension, daily benefits or unemployment benefits, you will remain subject to mandatory insurance in Switzerland unless you receive income (such as a salary or pension) from your new country of residence. You may also continue to be subject to mandatory insurance if you receive income from other EU/EFTA countries or from the UK (other than your country of residence).

Right to opt out: If you move to Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Portugal, Spain or Finland, you may, under certain circumstances, have a right to opt out within three months of the date of your move. That means that you and/or your family members who are not in gainful employment have the option to choose the country in which you have health insurance. To exercise this right, you must submit a written request for exemption from the Swiss insurance obligation to the relevant cantonal authority within the specified period. An exemption is definitive and irrevocable.

If you exercise your right to opt out, you must send confirmation of your exemption to SWICA immediately.

For more detailed information, please contact your SWICA agency.
